WAR RIDDEN EUROPE IS OBJECT LESSON

REVEREND GEORGE E. LOCKHART OF BELOIT GIVES ADDRESS AT BAPTIST CHURCH DAY.

HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

Finances of Local Church and Its Var- ious Societies in Excellent Con- dition.—Nominations Are Accepted.

"War ridden Europe is an object lesson to the Christian people of America," said the Reverend George E. Lockhart of Beloit in an address at the annual church day meeting of the First Baptist church, last evening. "The nations of Europe have placed in the foreground their cathedrals, their art and their culture, but they have forgotten to place in the fore- ground the Lord Jesus Christ as their leader and guide. Never before has there been so great an opportunity for the Christian people of America, happily and marvelously free from the curse of a terrible war, to demon- strate the depths of their Christianity and their capacity for serving the church. It is a chance for the members of our denomination and church that it was the spiritual side of church life is important and unless that phase is developed the church does not suc- ceed. It is imperative and vital that church finances be in good condition but that was not all for the very func- tion of the church has to do with men's lives and men's souls. It looks after their spiritual welfare and unless it builds up the spiritual it has failed."

The Beloit pastor took occasion to score church members who were "dead weights" who do not do their part of the work and who, at the close of a church year he is sometimes tempted to preach a sermon on the subject of "State Saints." "I seldom think," he declared, "since the endanger the strength of the whole church organization."

There were more than three hundred persons at the church banquet which was served at seven o'clock in the church parlors.

Following the dinner Reverend Joseph C. Hizen was elected moderator for the evening and the reports of the various church officers and societies were read. The report of the church treasurer and of the board of trust- ees indicated that the church is in a sound financial condition as a result of the every member canvass which was made early in the year at the time of establishing the budget system of church finance. The report on benev- olence showed that the church had paid its entire apportionment for all missionary activities, and in several instances had exceeded its allotment, the amount in excess to apply next year. It was the expressed opinion of those present that the every member canvass should be made again this year to insure the further success of the church in financial matters.

The proposition of a week's revival meetings to be held late in October with Dr. Donald D. McLaurin of Madison in charge was approved by the church members and the committee will be decided upon at the weekly church meeting next Thursday evening.

BROTHER JOSEPH DUTTON EXPLAINS THE REASON OF HIS DEATH

In a letter to "The Field Afar," a foreign missionary publication of the Catholic church, Brother Joseph Dutton explains the reason for his reported death from leprosy, a year or more ago. He writes:

"You see, it was this way. Our regu- lar time for a gripe had come—same as usual. I got it the first year fifty-five of our people died, chief- ly old, weak cases, but since then it has been rather mild until this year, when it was extremely severe. We did not have so many deaths, perhaps, be- cause of far better hospital accom- modations, but the attacks lasted a long time. In three months the settlement had about four hundred cases."

Eastern Eleven May Adopt Passing Style of Game.—Pass Adds a Lot to the Game.

(By George R. Holmes.)
New York, Sept. 24.—(Kees students) The forward pass will come into its own this season, and that more of the open style game will be exhibited than in years. If they are right it means the capitulation of a raft of Eastern critics and particularly Eastern coaches who heretofore have gazed down with rather lofty disdain on that play.

The East for years has looked askance at the forward pass. It has been regarded as a last ditch resort—to be used only in the last half or quarter in a final desperate attempt to pull a rabbit out of the fire. It was too dangerous, they contended, and it never would work against formidable defenses.

The first big intercollegiate combat in 1913 gave the little Notre Dame, with a rattling good football team and no reputation, came East to meet Uncle Sam's Army aggregation at West Point. What happened is history now. The Hoosiers simply buried the Soldiers under an avalanche of skillful passing, executed by little Gus Dorais and his mates.

The army was squelched, 35 to 13. The East gasped. The Hoosiers, at least not as she was played in the East. However it didn't take the Army long to get "hep" to the game and in the annual Army-Soldier scrum that same year, the Soldiers won hands down. The victory was directly attributable to clever passing. Other Eastern coaches, however, have been slow in following suit.

There still seems to be a wide diversity of opinion about the merits of the spiral tossing. Its opponents say that it is too dangerous, that it presents less loss more often than gain. They also rise to the whole aspect of a game can be changed in less than a minute, and for that reason they liken it to stock market speculation—you're "a million" one minute and pauper the next.

But as it may, it is generally agreed that the forward pass adds to the game from the spectator's point of view. Two teams, both good on the line, and resorting to the old-fashioned running game, the game as does the quick flight of a bullet with half a dozen boys ready to pop on the neck of the fellow who is being hit. Too, there is always a possibility that someone will leap into the air, grab the ball and make the spectacular run through a field that never fails to bring the stands to their feet. The opening of the pass opens the game in cases like this, that it is too dangerous. Its supporters come back with the argument that when a team is developed in skillful passing as was the Notre Dame eleven in 1913, the danger is reduced to an unimportant minimum. Therefore the whole question of developing skill in passing, and while the pass may be bad for the arm it may be the savior of an arm.

The younger school of players that has come up since 1912 and 1913 are drilled in passing the ball and away with it after the old-fashioned way of the boys of the old school. So, the forward pass isn't already here, it is coming strong, and in the opinion of most coaches it won't be long until it is the biggest feature of a team's offense.

KLINE AND CARPENTER DECIDE TENNIS TITLE ON SATURDAY AFTERNOON

The trials for the championship in the M. C. A. tennis tournament between H. F. Carpenter and J. C. Kline will be played Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock on the court at the head of Milwaukee street. The public is cordially invited.

The Lucky "Stiffs."
Philadelphia, Sept. 24.—If you are a Phillies fan, you will be glad to hear that the team is going to laugh themselves into the lead.

They are Al Demaree, the well-known cartoonist, Milton McGraw and George Whitted. McGraw considered the latter a draftwood, so he cut them out of the last season while the others were leading the league with every prospect of finishing first. Stock and Demaree were very peevish, as they figured they were being cut out of a world's series melon. When the Giants didn't win the pennant they snickered audibly. And now that appears McGraw had been a probable winner, they're guffawing outright. Whitted's case is almost the same. George was sore when the Braves sold him last winter. The Phils in the Vagabond deal, the Braves looked sure to win. Now that the Phils look like they'll figure in the October cutting, George has joined the cheering chorus.

Blind Men and Women.
It is estimated that throughout the world blind men outnumber blind women in the proportion of two to one.

LEADERS IN LEAGUES CINCHING PENNANTS

Both Boston Red Sox and Phillies Win Double Headers Yesterday.

Down! Down! clear to the basement fell the Cubs yesterday as the result of the double beating given them by Philadelphia, who clinched the National league pennant. The Phillies today are six and a half games ahead of Brooklyn and the Braves are trailing in third place a full seven games behind as the result of being licked by the Pirates. Nothing can stop the Red Sox it seems, for they trounced Cleveland twice yesterday, and Detroit is four and a half games behind. Chicago staggered up enough fight to down Washington and are in fifteen games from the top. Chicago fans are speculating on the threat made by Charles Comiskey that he will not allow the Sox to play in the city series without they finish at least third. Failure of the high priced stars to deliver the goods and make a pennant fight out of it is the reason. At that the Chicago fans are not blaming the Sox owner.

Alexander Enough.
Chicago, Ill., Sept. 24.—Grover Alexander, the Phillies star, yesterday pitched the leading National league club to a victory over Chicago by the score of 6 to 1, and Rixey won the second game by the count of 3 to 2. As the result of this double beating the Chicago Cubs bumped clear down in the cellar below the Giants, who are practically tied with them, both being a fraction over seventeen games from the top.

By scoring his 30th victory Alexander received a $1,000 bonus and the down-trodden and licked Cubs were easy victims for that roll of error. The Quaker marvel should have blanked the Bruins but for two errors in the second inning. Moran's steam roller put the opening game in the second inning when he scored one for the Cubs in that inning after which Alexander settled and it was all off. The Cubs had many opportunities to win the second game but failed to obtain the hits that would count the runs. Douglass hurled for Bresnahan. An error by Phelan queered matters for Douglas in the fifth inning and handed the game to the Phillies.

Sox Take Game.
The White Sox broke their losing streak, advanced a full game on Wednesday in the hot fight for third place and started a winning streak all because they defeated the Griffs, 2 to 1, Thursday. Jim Scott hurried the Sox out of their rut, holding the Senators to a few scattered hits.

Blackburn came back into the game strong after a rest on the bench. It was Lena's scratch rap in the sixth that paved the way for the winning run of the Sox. Schalk followed with a double to right, sending Blackburn to third. McBride fumbled Scott's grounder, but recovered the ball in time to chase Schalk down between second and third. Blackburn scoring in the meantime with what proved the winning run.

Harry Harper, the rookie pitcher, who started to work for his home club, tried to give the game to the Sox by passing everybody in sight in the second and third innings. Blackburn and Schalk walked in the second and on that and Scott beat out an infield hit, filling the sacks. Harper failed to locate the plate, and passed Weaver, forcing in Blackburn.

Cannot Stop Them.
Boston, Sept. 24.—The Boston Red Sox today gained two more victories at the expense of Cleveland, 5 to 4 and 6 to 2. The visitors pressed Boston closely in the first game, when Joe Judge, pitching his first game in a month, weakened. Coumbe, who succeeded Kieffer in the fourth, kept his hits scattered, except in the fifth and seventh.

The second game was won by Boston almost at the start, and Brenton soon gave way to Collamore. Roth, whose hard hitting has been a feature of the series, knocked the ball over the high field fence for a homer in the fourth. Graney, the Cleveland left fielder, broke his collarbone when he made a difficult catch yesterday, it became known today.

Right to Last.
Philadelphia, Sept. 24.—Detroit defeated Philadelphia today, 6 to 5, and made a clean sweep of the series of three games. The home team staged a battling rally at Loudermilk's expense in the eighth, and took a lead of one run. In the ninth Knowlson took Sheehan's place. Kavanagh led off with a triple and McKee walked. An error was followed by Vito walking, giving the bases. Cobb fanned, but Veach scored the runs which won the game with a single to left field.

Good Bye! Clarke.
Pittsburgh, Sept. 24.—Manager Fred Clarke played his last game of baseball in the National League today and his team defeated Boston, 8 to 4. Clarke was presented with a bound book containing the names of several thousand Pittsburgh friends and the players gave him an eight-day clock. Marmox started the game, but gave way to Cooper at the end of the fifth inning. The Pirates knocked Rudolph out of the box and Hughes finished the contest.

Unless Manager Griffiths changes his mind between now and next season the 1916 race will see Eddie Foster stationed permanently at second base and Howard Shanks chained to third base. That's the combination Griffith has been experimenting with from time to time this season and he now announces that it will stand from this out. Shanks has proved an efficient third baseman while Foster works even better at second than he did at third.

LINE-UP ANNOUNCED FOR THE CARDINALS

Higgins, Rockford Three-I Leaguer Who Whitewashed Lafferty and Beloit, to Pitch for Cards.

Higgins, one of the leading pitchers in the Three I league, will be on the mound for the Janesville Cardinals Sunday afternoon when they cross bats with the crack West End nine of Chicago, the best traveling line out of the Windy City. Because Owsby and Wright are with the Chicago Cubs at the present time, neither of these two men could be secured and search showed that the Rockford pitcher was available. Just how good this Higgins is can be demonstrated from the fact that he walked the Beloit Fairies with Sam Lafferty in the box by the tune of 5 to 0 last Sunday. He had it all over the Beloit greaser ball annointer and none of the Beloiters could touch him.

Deaney will catch the game and the battery department is well taken care of. The infield will be composed of Wakefield, Three I leaguer, at first, and it will be remembered that this Jack poled a homer during a crisis in a recent Beloit game. He is a four hundred hitter and can field his sack so satisfactorily that he is certain to go above the Three I league next year. For second, "Denny" Blake's place, the Cardinals have got Joe Kernan, a southern leaguer. Beloit needed strengthening so bad to win a game, that Blake was secured at a fancy price to cover the key stone sack for them and shift Keene over to third to take the place of Mike Cavanaugh, who it is reported has been given his exit from the Fairies. For short the Cards have Kirk, a leaguer, and Jack Kernan for third. Eddie Lenahan is due to help the Madison Farbucks against the Fairies, Saturday and Sunday, but since the Cards have Wakefield he will not be necessary. The fans hate to see Blake absent from the Cardinal line-up, but it is promised that if the Cardinals show any tendency to play again, he will be secured after the game Sunday, in the outer garden the Cardinals have Baxter and Collins, Rockford leaguers, and Nelson or Chamberlin.

It is certain about the proposed series with the Beloit Fairies as no understanding can be reached between the managements of the two teams and Beloit has showed no inclination to play again. It is reported that the Fairies are considering playing the Beloit North Ends a city championship series, which of course would not allow a series of games with the Cardinals, as the Janesville men could not arrange games with the Fairies before or after a North End series.

A victory is expected to come to the Cards Sunday, over the West Ends because of the strengthened line-up. The Three-I leaguers are all stickers and fast men.

In reply to the report given out by a Beloit "copyist" that Blake, Owsby, Lenahan, and Kernan would not play at Janesville, the Janesville managers this morning only pointed to the score which Pitcher Higgins beat Beloit. Lenahan was under obligation to play with the Madison club and so no attempt was made to induce him away. As for Blake, if Beloit needed the Cardinal player so bad to win their games Saturday and Sunday, Manager Caldwell stated this morning, he would have loaned the Fairies his services in hopes they recover from their losing streak.

If the Beloit series is not scheduled for October, the Rockford Maroons will be brought here on Oct. 3, and the crack Mt. Morris team, the week following.

THE BASIS OF RAILROADING.

One of the railroads had a bad collision recently. The conductor, engineer, and fireman of an extra train all forgot about a regular passenger train, the schedule of which they knew perfectly well, and ran into it from behind. After getting all the facts the superintendent of the division reported that the accident was caused by the chance assignment of three moral weaklings to the same crew. The conductor had been fired once before for causing a collision and was not a man of strong character. The engineer's record showed three previous suspensions, and he was known to indulge occasionally in gross immoralities. The fireman had been in trouble over a scandalous domestic difficulty. The superintendent summed up:

Having in the service such men as these, the best way to frame up a collision is to get them together in the same crew.

The Railway Age Gazette comments on the gravity of this danger and the difficulty of forestalling it, and suggests that perhaps it would be a good rule to make sure of at least one wholly trustworthy man on every train. The point is that in his particular railroad does not differ from any other human pursuit having to do with the hard facts of this world. The basis of them all is character and lack of character means loss and peril and death.

That tells the story and points the moral. There ought to be one man in three who can be depended on to assume responsibility, but in this case the one man was lacking.

Many people complain of lack of opportunity to go to the front, forgetful of the fact that the front demands men who never forget, and who are faithful to every trust imposed.

The great university of life, where men are trained for service, knows little about excuses and lapses of memory. It may have some patience with the boy, when he first enters the world, it is cold-blooded and relentless to the men and women who graduate and claim to be ready for service.

The man who steps into a cab and lays his hand on the throttle, is supposed to be a competent engineer, able not only to stand the strain of the hard work demanded, but equipped as well with a brain that thinks and a mind always alert and active.

This is true in every department of toil. Men and women are taken at their face value but the test of time places them in the limelight, where only real values survive. The three men tested in the train wreck, were not equal to the strain.

The question of advancement, in every calling, is an individual question. It is up to us to make good, and no power outside of ourselves can render much assistance.

AN INDUSTRY DOOMED.

The sugar industry of the United States is doomed to extermination unless the next session of congress restores the tariff. This is being urged by the democratic press of the country and should have some influence on the administration.

Under the present law the duty is entirely removed the first of next May and America becomes the dumping ground for free sugar from all parts of the world. It is a well established fact that American labor can not compete with the cheap labor of the South American countries, and unless congress furnishes relief the home industry will be driven out of business. This means a loss of one hundred million dollars in investment, and idleness for an army of employees.

The world's war brought temporary relief, but it is only temporary. While the industry has been crippled abroad, great stocks of sugar are accumulating to be dumped on our market as soon as the duty is removed.

There is every argument in favor of restoring the duty. The public treasury needs the revenue of fifty odd million dollars a year and the people need the industry. Pressure should be brought on congress, at the next session, to furnish relief by repealing the Underwood tariff on sugar.

THE WASHRAG'S TURN TO GO.

The washrag must go. The United States Public Health Service Agency has so decided. It must follow the towel, the drinking cup, the hair brush and the habit of kissing. We knew it was coming. Next we expect that an embargo will be placed on shaking hands and the use of straps for the stand-ups in street cars. After they have once been handled, they will have to be destroyed. There might be a wandering germ that would locate on somebody's palm, you know. With all our fads and fancies, we are any healthier than our forebears were? Do we live longer? Do we bring up better children? Are we better ourselves physically or morally? But what's the use?—Leslie's Magazine.

The American public has gone daffy on a lot of fads, and prominent among them is the public health service referred to. Our own state leads the procession with the law of eugenics, and many of our young people threaten the border to be married rather than submit to the indignity.

The age in which we live is a busy age, and lots of people devote their time to regulating other people's business. The national and state government set the pace and regulation has become a mania.

Are we all as thankful as we ought to be that Mr. Bryan is out of the state department? Are we thankful morning, noon and night, and before and after meals and whenever we say our prayers? Mohammedans pray regularly five times a day. At least as often as that we should be thankful for our great deliverance from William Bryan, with special bursts of ejaculatory thankfulness whenever we think of Haiti, Mexico, Nicaragua, grape-juice, Chautauqua or Europe, and whenever the Germans sink a passenger steamer—Life.

The outlook for the Wisconsin tobacco crop is not very flattering. The elements seemed to conspire against it, and the hail storms played havoc with it. The statement is made that one insurance company is the principal owner of some two hundred crops in Rock and Dane counties.

The good Lord seems to smile on the Walworth county fair. While the exhibit is always fine the weather is usually propitious, and success crowns effort in large degree. Good for Walworth county.

It is estimated that the annual income of Great Britain is $12,000,000,000 and that the annual saving is one-sixth of that amount. The war is costing the nation about $5,000,000,000 a year, and the economy has been reduced, but with thrift and economy the people are preparing for a long siege and do not seem discouraged.

Germany is preparing to establish a government in Belgium, and that part of France occupied by her armies. This will be better than no government, but time alone will determine its permanency.

GERMAN'S OPINION ON RUSS RETREAT

General Declares That Teutons Too Well Forced To Fall Into Trap As Did Napoleon.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Budapest, Sept. 24.—General von der Marwitz, the German commander of the Tenth Army corps, who is undergoing a cure at Posiven, in Hungary, after an arduous campaign in Poland, declares that the Russian policy of fighting a retreat, while in some ways very effective, must inevitably ruin the morale of the soldiers. Discussing the campaign in Poland, he said:

"If the Russians repeat the strategy of 1812 by devastating and burning everything behind them, they can do it without compelling us to repeat any of the mistakes of Napoleon. It is a foolish mistake to assume that the German staff is not thoroughly familiar with the lessons of Napoleon's 1812 campaign. We have studied it thoroughly, and have learned all it has to teach."

"I came from the front a few days ago. I was located to the south of Cholm. There the Russian wheat was mostly untouched, but the villages are burned down and the Russians have taken all the agricultural laborers with them. We immediately formed German agricultural committees to harvest the wheat. In some of the places the wheat is now being burned further toward the interior I learn that wheat also, but this does not bother us. As a matter of fact, we shall not really invade Russia proper. We shall reach a certain line, will there reconstruct the defensive works, and remain until peace comes. The tactics of the Russians to retreat when in danger, is a very dangerous one. We shall follow them into dangerous positions ourselves. We are much too clever for that."

The continuous retreat is not good military tactics—it is too heavy a morale of the soldiers. In fact, my impression is that, to a great extent, the spirit of the Russian army is broken already. It will not be any of them or not, for the Russians at present are incapable of any offensive on a large scale. Here and there the Russian possesses intact fortifications which can undertake a partial offensive sometimes, but they do not achieve any success of note. What successes they win at isolated points cannot affect the general situation.

"As to all this talk about 1812 tactics, I am perfectly safe in saying that our armies will only continue the pursuit as long as our communications are not threatened and the work of supplying the army goes on unhindered."

The Daily Novelette

The Martyr.
Professor Please Passit, that rare thing, a man of action as well as a dreamer, was about to prove his contention that a falling man actually is entertained on his way down by a mental panorama of his past life.

Taking a long breath, he dropped from the twenty-sixth story of the Cottonworth Building. The result exceeded his fondest expectations.

At the eighteenth floor he saw himself as a young man of forty, purely kissing his wife's maid, and taking down her impressions in the way of science, of the difference between whiskey kisses and those of her clean-shaven policeman.

At the thirteenth floor he recollected himself, on a rainy day of twelve, hammering his younger sister's finger tips to see if the impact on the various fingers would produce varied cries.

At the ninth floor he saw himself, aged two, but always a student, beginning his famous researches in fluid expansion by squirting milk through the spaces of his front teeth.

LOCAL ELEVEN READY

FOR GAME TOMORROW

Tomorrow afternoon, at Edgerton, the Janesville high school football team will play their first game of the season with the Edgerton eleven. For the past two years Janesville has not been able to win over this team, but this time the players say the outcome will be different. Janesville has a strong team this year, especially in the back field, with Cronin, a veteran of last year's squad, and "Colonel" Lee and Weirick. These men will play with the Edgerton line. "Doc" Richards, the star end of the 1914 eleven, will play the quarterback position.

Captain Mooney and Viney make a pair of very fast ends, which is a great asset to the team. The other positions will probably be filled with Sawson at center, Marshall and Kuculski at guards, and Ryan and McCullough at tackles. Falter, Pond, and Koller will be taken along as substitutes. The team will leave tomorrow morning and a number of rooters will accompany them.

Mrs. Kathryn Maher of Milwaukee will arrive here this evening to accompany them.

GEORGE HANTHORN CALLED BY DEATH

Resident of County for Over Fifty Years Succumbs at Home in This City.

Death called George Hanthorn, a well known citizen of the county and city, in the eighties, at his home at 807 South Fremont street, about 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. Up to a period of two months ago Mr. Hanthorn had been hearty and strong, but since that time he had failed rapidly until his death came today. He was eighty-three years of age.

George Hanthorn is well known to the older residents of Janesville and of Rock county. Thirty years ago he was a factor in republican politics. In 1885-86 he served in the capacity of sheriff, being the twenty-second official of this nature in the county. Since that time he has acted for two terms as street commissioner for the city.

The deceased was of Pennsylvania ancestry, and was born at West Chester, May 26, 1832. In 1856 he came to Rock county and settled in Johnson Center, residing there for twenty years. He later moved to Janesville and had made his home here since.

Mr. Hanthorn was a member of the Congregational church and a man of sterling character. His wife preceded him to the beyond two years ago, the sixteenth of this month. Surviving are two sons: Oscar Hanthorn of Cedar Rapids, Ia., and O. V. Hanthorn of this city.

Notice of funeral arrangements will be made tomorrow.

Differentness.
"In all my trip I don't believe I saw anything any more lovely than our old river in the country as it looks on a June day with the piled up clouds reflected in the water and the long grasses waving on the bank and the cows coming down from the pasture lands to drink at the pool."

So says a friend of mine who has recently come back from a trip to the tropics.

"Then you were sorry you went?" I asked.

"Oh, no," she said quickly. "Far from it. I wouldn't have missed it for anything, and I am already longing for the time when I can go again."

"And yet you can find just as much beauty here at home."

"Yes," she said slowly, "but it wasn't because it was more beautiful that I loved it but because it was different. Pines are as beautiful as palms, but when you've seen pines all your life you love to see palms. It was the differentness I loved more than the beauty. Perhaps I'm queer that way."

Do you think she is queer, reader?

I don't.

It seems to me that the love of differentness is something that is born in almost every one of us.

Do you remember as a child how you adored anything out of the established order of things?

Wasn't it fun to eat in the kitchen?

In housecleaning time, for instance, that season your mother pretended to dread and actually reveled in with a kind of self-flagellating frenzy, don't you remember how delighted you were when the carpets were up all over the house and you trod on bare floors?

And then the day the dining-room was being cleaned and you came home from school at noon to find dinner served in the kitchen, don't you remember how the differentness delighted you, and what a savor the meal took from its strange surroundings?

And then the spring and summer they were strictly confined within their run, but in the fall, after the vegetables were up and the flowers had ceased to bloom, they were permitted to roam loose through the grounds for a few days to forage for themselves. I can't tell you what thrill it gave me to see a hen stalking about the garden, but I have never had a truer quest idea than why I liked it but I know now—it was a reversal of the established order of things.

She Wanted To Take A Bath With Her Underwear On.

A friend has confessed to me that one of her childish ambitions was to keep her underwear on while she took a bath. Her mother, a person of imagination, strictly forbade it as an insane thing to desire, but she finally braved the penalty and did it.

Differentness is the spice of life—not the solid nourishing, necessary daily food, but the spice that makes that food palatable. When daily living becomes unpalatable it is often a little pinch of differentness that we crave, whether we know it or not.

Household Hint

THE TABLE.
Huntington Shrimp—Melt two tablespoons butter and stir constantly till well browned. Add two tablespoons peanut butter and stir till well blended, then add 3½ tablespoons flour. When thoroughly mixed, pour on gradually, while stirring constantly. 1½ cups of stock chicken is best and bring to a boiling point. Add one cup hot boiled rice and one cup canned shrimp broken in pieces. Season with half teaspoon of salt, a little pepper, turn into a buttered baking dish, cover with croutons and bake in hot oven until croutons are brown.

Fried Tomatoes With Cheese.—Remove skin from firm tomatoes, cut in thick slices dip in beaten egg, then in crumbs, fry in hot fat, first on one side then on other. Do not turn until tomato is nicely browned. After turning sprinkle with grated cheese.

Fried Green Peppers.—Cut open the peppers lengthwise, remove all seeds and white portions, cut in crosswise slices, cover with oil, add a little salt, let stand ten minutes. Wipe slices and let cook in two or more tablespoons of butter melted in frying pan. When soft and slightly browned spread over or around a broiled steak or dish of chops.

CANNING AND PRESERVING.
English Chowchow—Chop half pound green tomatoes, half pound onions, one dozen green peppers, one head cauliflower, one head cabbage, two bunches celery. Chop all up fine, sprinkle with salt and let stand two or four hours; drain and add one ounce celery seed, one ounce mustard, one-half pound mixed whole spices. Mix thoroughly. Boil one hour in vinegar to which one pound brown sugar is added. Mix one-fourth pound mustard with a little cold vinegar to a smooth paste and stir into the boiling vinegar, then add pickles. Let stand on low fire one hour, stirring frequently. Put in glass jars and seal. Very appetizing and delicious.

Spanish Pickles.—Wash one peck green tomatoes and thinly slice, peel four onions and thinly slice, peel alternate layers with salt using one cupful. Cover and let stand overnight. In the morning drain thoroughly, put in preserving kettle and add half ounce each of cloves, allspice berries and peppercorns; one-half cup brown mustard seed; one pound brown sugar and two green peppers, wiped and finely chopped.

Pour over vinegar enough to cover all. Heat gradually to boiling point and let simmer 1½ hours. Store in glass jars.

Canned Pickles.—Two quarts small cucumbers after cutting up, one pint small onions sliced thin; put all in salt water overnight. In the morning drain dry, cover with vinegar, one cup in vinegar, one teaspoon of celery seed. Boil about twenty minutes and seal while hot.

Canned Peaches.—Select a medium-sized peach, put a large pan of water and pour over boiling water. Try them with a sharp knife and as soon as they will peel easily remove them to another pan (keeping them in too long will make them watery). Now cut around them and remove seed. The skin will then peel easily. Now put three pints peaches and one cup sugar in saucepan. Cover with water and boil about one hour. Now add one cup (try with a fork); remove from fire and seal in mason jars. It is always best to cook but one quart in each vessel. Put them in hands with a fork and they will be lovely.

When making peach and plum preserves put a handful of the seeds in bottom of kettle; will keep fruit from settling.

Ginger.—Peels—Four pounds hard winter peels, four pounds sugar, one-fourth pound crystallized ginger, two lemons. Peel and slice peels very finely, add sugar and about a cup of water; stir, mix well and let come to a boil and boil slowly one hour. Boil two lemons twenty minutes and let juice run out and cut into and very thinly add juice rind and water in which lemons were boiled and boil slowly about an hour. When done, should be clear and amber colored. Great care must be taken to prevent burning and it must be stirred often.

Mint Jelly.—Make a jelly of either green grapes or crabapples, using one pint juice to one pint sugar. Just before jelly is done, add a half pound mint, let boil until done, then strain and put in glasses. This jelly is elegant served with meats.

POLLUTED SWIMMING POOLS ARE A MENACE TO HEALTH

Ninety-one large municipalities in the United States have established polluted swimming pools.

The demand for knowledge of swimming. Swimming pools are on the increase. The United States public health service publishes an article by Wallace A. Hatcher, Ph. D., of Columbia University on the results obtained from a careful examination of six swimming pools.

Polluted Swimming Pools May Transmit Disease.

It is pointed out in the report that in swimming in polluted water, typhoid fever, conjunctivitis, and other diseases may be acquired. The report gives in detail the results of the bacteriological and chemical analysis of the various pools and of the effects of refiltration and chemical disinfection. It is pointed out that when the water is refiltered and when it is cloudy, thereby making the danger of accidental drowning very great. When refiltration is practiced the water becomes clear and the danger is avoided.

The reports conclude that the cubic capacity of a pool affects its sanitary condition; that the process of adding dilution water is an efficient means of reducing the number of bacteria in the water, and that the supervision of the plant and the class of attendants are also important factors in pool sanitation. The combination of refiltration and disinfection by the use of calcium hypochloride renders the sanitary condition of the water excellent. Many of the colleges and secondary schools of the United States have as a graduation requirement a swimming ability to swim. This important field of athletics should be surrounded by every sanitary safeguard.

CHICAGO BRIDE TRIES TO DIE IN A THEATER

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Milwaukee, Sept. 24.—Mrs. Louise McDonough, an eighteen-year-old Chicago girl and bride of a month, attempted suicide last night at the Orpheum theater in Milwaukee, by firing a bullet through her breast.

Mrs. McDonough's maiden name was Louise Neumann. Her parents live on the north side. After the evening performance Mrs. McDonough went to the dressing room to visit friends.

Her maid, who was alone, she drew a revolver and shot herself.

GIRDLES AND BELTS ARE NOT TO BE WORN

How in the World Is Mere Man Going to Tell Where Friend Wife Is Wearing Her Waist?

By Margaret Mason.

Make haste and take your girdle off.

It's not good style they say. Though belted Earls may be good form.

The belted girl's passe.

New York, Sept. 24.—Here's something else to take off in the name of Fashion. Girdles and belts simply aren't to be worn this season.

Stylish decrees may bring the blush to the cheek of those who recall what a vital part the girdle plays on the 1915 evening gown.

Rob an evening gown of its last stay of stability and what have you? There's nothing to it. Since an evening gown consists solely of a girdle and a shoulder strap, a banishment of the girdle is bound to leave much open to discussion.

No doubt many will unobson themselves unduly on this subject. It's bound to make it mighty embarrassing for a fellow man.

How in the world can he tell whether the lady fair is wearing her waist in the middle or up under her shoulder blades with no distinguishing belt to blaze a trail?

Even the poor girl herself is apt to be a bit dazed and misty her waistline and what have you? There's nothing to it. Since an evening gown consists solely of a girdle and a shoulder strap, a banishment of the girdle is bound to leave much open to discussion.

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May Be Addressed To Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) What is good for clearing the blood?

(2) Will you please tell me what will clean a discolored bracelet?

E. D. & M. M.

(1) Sulphur and molasses—an old blood purifying remedy—is taken by many persons.

For this tonic the formula consists of a paste of sulphur and molasses, cream of tartar to a pinch being added to each teaspoonful of the mixture.

The dose from time immemorial has been a teaspoonful every morning for three days; then three days are omitted, and another three doses on consecutive days are taken.

Then comes another halting space for three days and a final dose the next three, making nine in all.

(2) If the bracelet is silver or solid gold, silver polish will clean it; if it is plated solid and the plate is wearing off, it will have to be dipped in gold.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Will fur trimming be worn very much for winter dresses?

(2) What color is ecru?

(3) What would be a nice present to give my girl friend for her birthday?

(4) Please give me full information as to how a bridal pair, best man, bridesmaids and flower girls walk into the church.

(5) Do not the bridesmaids walk alone and the best men act as ushers?

(6) Does the maid of honor wear a different colored dress than the bridesmaids?

Glimpses of Married Life

By Mrs. Eva Leonard

"Do you know, Hal is getting to be a regular whiner?" Hal's grandmother looked at him over the top of her glasses. "I think you can't tell soon to teach children how to face life."

"You are a good deal of a Spartan, mother," laughed Nell. "Was it training that made you able to march through anything with head up and colors flying?"

"My mother was a very wise woman. I remember a little too. I used to have to bring a pan of chips from the woods every day. I grew very tired of it and whined around when asked to do it."

One day mother said, "Take the pan and while you are gathering the chips, notice where it hurts you and come and tell me. I was so interested trying to locate the discomfort that the pan was full in no time and when I reported rather shamefacedly that I couldn't tell where it hurt, mother said, 'Don't ever let me hear you whine about anything, so small that you can't find it. It made a great impression on me.'"

"That was a very clever idea, wasn't it?" Nell looked up brightly into Mrs. Morton's face.

"When I was older mother often said to me: 'Make yourself do something every day that you dislike.' It's a great training," continued the old lady.

"Nowadays people do only the things they like. The aim seems to be to make children like what you want them to do."

"I know," replied the old lady, "and in my opinion it does not fit people to face hard conditions. They choose the course of least resistance every time, and I believe it undermines character to choose only pleasant things."

"How would you stop Hal from whining?" asked Nell.

"I have at home a little room off the kitchen that I used to call the 'howlery growlery.' I sent Dick into that room when he whined or cried or made himself a disagreeable neighbor. As I called it, if he could come out whenever he could, little and be cheerful. The room was light, he had playthings there. The idea was that he must not disturb anybody else with his bad feelings, and

CHAPTER VI.

SO great had the urgency of Boroday's position become that the band met at the Hall on Thursday of the week after the country club address. Lethbridge was to get his instructions; Talbot wished to discuss his prospect.

After dinner, the night being warm, they had coffee on the terrace. A summer storm had come up. All at once a flash threatened Saint Jude's.

"I've got it!" he said. "What is it they call the big building back of the church?"

None of the men knew. It was, as a matter of fact, the parish house. Lethbridge, however, knew its function.

"Fine prospect that!" he drawled. "That's where the Sunday School is held, and where they keep the potted plants and forks for the church suppers."

"It's a damned fine building," said Lethbridge. "What would they do if it burned down?"

"They were too unfamiliar with church affairs to hazard a guess. Elinor, who had been sitting silent, suddenly voiced an objection to Huff's plan."

"There must be some other way," she said. "The children—they have sewing-classes and entertainments for children there. It's the parish house."

"If lightning struck the parish house tonight," Huff said quite eagerly. "This is Thursday. By Sunday morning they would be taking up a shocking big collection to rebuild it."

The idea had taken hold of his imagination. Even the suggestion of a large part of the offering might be in check, mattered not. But Elinor was obstinate.

"You can do it some place else," she said. "Not here. They struggled very hard to build the church and they need money now. Mr. Ward told me."

Huff turned on her jealously. "Ward—that's the preacher chap?"

"He is the assistant rector," Elinor replied with dignity. "He's coming here, then?"

"Twice. Once when father died, and once to warn me against all that. Not that she had forgotten but few minutes in the valley, under the moon; but that had been an accident—hardly a call."

Talbot chuckled. But Huff was thinking hard. Elinor had been different lately a little softer. Ward represented all that the men Elinor knew were not—law to their violence, order to their disorder. There was almost a snarl in his voice.

"He'd better stay down in his valley with his old woman," he said, and leave you alone. You don't need him."

"I'm not so sure of that," Elinor replied quietly, and left him staring. The next night, he did it himself, without the assistance of the band. Into he not only put the devilish ingenuity of his experience, but his new hatred of Ward.

Church property is always easy to mess. It was the work of five minutes to crawl through a basement window and of half an hour to make his preparations.

He looked at his watch when he had finished. It was just midnight. In two hours or before the first beam, he would be back in the city, establishing his alibi.

The fire-whistles in the village awakened Elinor at something after three o'clock. All of her room was filled with the red glare of the burning parish house. Old Henriette knickered at her door.

"The church is burning down in the valley," she called. "It's a grand sight!"

Elinor was throwing on her clothes. She must see Ward. She would sell her pearls. She would build a new parish house. She said this over and over to herself as she struggled down the hill.

A new parish house, better than the old, with plenty of room for the children to play in! At least it was night, the children were safe in their beds. Thank God for that! She was a quick thinker. That she had thanked the God in whom she did not believe.

The fire had gained too much headway to be checked. All the efforts of the volunteer department and the steam engine were directed toward saving the church. For a time it seemed as if Saint Jude's must go.

Elinor watched the destruction. It seemed as though a hand had fastened itself around her chest. Then she saw Ward. He was on the ridge-pole of the church roof with a batchel.

She could see him chopping. From that time she never took her eyes away from him. Other men were there. She did not see them. She saw only Ward battling on the ridge-pole and high above on the steeple the sturdy cross of his faith.

Once the men on the street below turned the full force of the hose on him. She saw him reel, saw him rise. She saw him by a miracle.

The fire gave died into the dawn. Saint Jude's was saved. Behind in its park the charred skeleton of the parish house showed how thoroughly Huff had done his work. Not until Ward had descended safely to the street did Elinor relax.

Ward found her sitting in one of the chairs along the pavement, her hair still in its long braid, her feet thrust into slippers, her eyes red from long staring.

The fire engine was being dragged away. The crowd, blackened and depressed, was surveying the ruins with a heavy heart. He turned and saw the girl, just at first he was not sure of her. It was always seeing her, mentally. Then he went toward her, his hand out.

"You see," he said, "what an hour may bring forth!" And then, "You reckless child, here in slippers!"

"I saw you on the roof," said Elinor, barely able to articulate. "Once I thought you had fallen."

"They nearly got me. It's rather sad isn't it? He stood, burthened in the cool dawn, and surveyed the ruin."

"People meet great crises simply. She tried to find some word of sympathy to say, but what was there poor child? She knew the true inwardness of that disastrous night. So, with pathetic eyes, she turned away."

"I go home now," she said, "I saw the glare—now I see you. I saw her lips tremble. 'I should like to help you with the new building.'"

"Fine!" said Ward heartily. "We'll get it that before long."

"If you had fallen—"

He was not listening. It came to her then how far apart they were. To her his falling would have meant the end of all things; to him, it would have meant the beginning of a useful eternity.

"If you wait a little, I'll run around and get my car and take you up."

He looked at her with satisfaction. She was glad to be with him a little longer. Until recently the work of the hand had always seemed a vague abstraction. Now one of it results lay before her. And there were other things fresh in her mind—old Hilary, dead of his revolt against law, and living in state before an altar erected to a God he had not recognized. And thinking her embodiment of what a woman should be.

Over her bitterness rose a hot wave of anger against Walter Huff. She had forbidden this thing and he had done it.

CHAPTER VII.

WARD BROUGHT HER a cup of coffee, and stood by with satisfaction. She drank it. In his eyes there was a mixture of depression and joy. The parish house was gone, and this girl before him was to marry another man. But they would build another parish house, and who knew—

He drove her up the hill in his small car. At the top of a rise he stopped the car and looked back. The night's devastation showed clearly. A black wound in the smiling heart of the valley.

Elinor watched him. "It means a great deal to you, doesn't it?"

"It's rather a facet—Of course we will build again, but there are things that could not be replaced. That isn't what troubles me. The fact is, I am afraid of responsibility."

"I was there last night, alone. I have a bad habit, when I have a mental problem to worry out, of walking up and down a room and lighting one cigarette after another. I am reckless with matches."

Then perhaps, after all, Walter had not done it.

The car climbed slowly. Ward kept his eyes straight ahead. Elinor cast little side glances at his profile.

"You said you had something to worry out?"

He drew a long breath. "I've got to go to New York to a big church. It's rather a wonderful opportunity."

Elinor made no sign except to clutch her hands as they lay ungloved in her lap.

"Then you will be leaving—us?"

"No," he said. "I shall not be leaving you."

"You like it here?"

"Very much." He turned and looked down at her. It was unwise. He realized that at once. So frail she looked, so softly, tenderly feminine! And, because he knew that, after the night, he had not yet got control over the most merest hand-clasp as she got out of the machine was all he dared. But at the top of the steps Elinor turned.

"You will never know just how sorry I am," she said, and went through her garden to the house.

From that Friday morning until the evening of the following day, Elinor was quite alone. How she spent the terrace, looking down into the valley. On Friday night, unable to sleep, she threw a negligee over her shoulders and went down to her garden. The village slept quietly, but there was a light in Ward's small window near the church. She remained on the terrace until the light was extinguished.

On Saturday Boroday's empty place cast a gloom over the meal. Walter Huff came a little late. Under the ease of his greeting there was a touch of uneasiness as he met Elinor's eyes. When the servants left the room, Talbot leaned forward to Walter.

"Now tell us about it," he said. Huff was frankly triumphant, but he still avoided Elinor's eyes. "It's working out exactly as I knew it would," he explained. Having once had a parish-house they can not do without it. The vestry carried only about a third insurance. And there's another point in our favor—the rector's away. He's got rheumatism. They are going to take up an additional purse to send him to Baden-Baden."

"Tomorrow morning. And tomorrow being Sunday, the assistant rector, Elinor's friend, will have it in charge until Monday morning."

"I shall warn him," said Elinor suddenly.

confronted Elinor squarely.

"That's it, is it?" he said. "I asked you not to do it—what you have done. The children used it all the time. They played basketball there. Besides, my wish should mean something to you."

Huff shrugged his shoulders. "I had burned a tennent full of people."

"A man was nearly killed. He was on the ridge-pole of the church and they turned the full strength of the water on him. I saw it. I almost fainted."

"You saw it?"

"I was there," said Elinor quietly. Huff rose angrily.

"Who were there? And who was it who almost fell off the roof? Your parson, I suppose."

Talbot silenced the boy. It was Lethbridge who took up the argument. He understood her position and sympathized. He said, "The fire was a mistake. But now that it is done—He spoke of Boroday's critical condition of their safety that depended on his, and finding her attitude to be unwise, he took refuge in her father's memory."

"If anything comes out, it will all come out," he reminded her. "It seems to me, Elinor, that you owe it to your father not to interfere. This isn't a new plan. Four or five years ago when the parish-house was first built we talked it over here. And it isn't as though we mean to hurt this fellow Ward. We will be three to one; he'll make no resistance."

"Yes," she said. "Three to one. That is the way we fight. Oh, I'm one of you, I know that—but it sickens me, sometimes."

The men were astounded, frankly uncomfortable.

The conference got nowhere. Elinor acknowledged the duty to the Russian, offered all her jewels, in fact, for his defense. But she stubbornly refused to countenance the attack on Mr. Ward. Huff relapsed into sullen silence, his eyes on her. The other men found every argument met by silence, except for one passionate outburst.

"He is my friend," she cried. "I have never had any friends, except one, year ago, a girl, it was Boroday. They who used my friendship for her. It was the Rutherford matter. Walter could not remember, but the rest of you—I tell you, I won't do this thing."

Talbot tried a new method. "It's a wealthy congregation," he explained. "It is not much for them, and it's safety for us. If we let Boroday go, he can make it bad for all of us."

Elinor turned on him. "Do you turn a rap for the congregation? Do you think the money goes without a struggle? The moment it goes into the offering it ceases to be money and becomes a success. We'll give it a fight and—some one will be killed."

It dawned even on Talbot after a time that her solicitude was for none of them. When he realized it, at last, he sat back with folded arms and frowning brows. Here was a cocky for sure: old Hilary's daughter, reared on pure violence, and in love with a parson!—old Hilary's daughter and successor, defying the law, in his hour of need, and quoting a divine trust in extenuation!

In view of her attitude, there seemed nothing to do.

"I'll give it up," said Lethbridge, after a pause.

There had never been any drinking in old Hilary's house. Only abstainers were ever taken into the house. But it was the custom of the two older men to remain at the table over their cigars, giving Walter and Elinor a half-hour together. That night, when Elinor rose from the table, Huff, although he rose with the others, made no move to follow her. She looked back from the doorway, a slim, almost childish figure, with beaming eyes.

"You'll give it up, won't you, kindly of me," she said wistfully. "I care for you as much as I ever did. You are all I have, you three. It is only that I have been thinking—"

For the first time since the organization of the band there was quarreling that night in old Hilary's parlor. At the end of an hour, Walter Huff flung himself out of the door, white with fury. He stumbled through the garden toward the garage, muttering as he went. In the dog alley he met Elinor.

"I was waiting for you," she said simply.

Huff stood before her, and the anger left his face.

"You're the one thing in all the world I felt sure of." His voice was heavy with defeat.

"I've been thinking about Boroday."

"Elinor, how far have things gone between you and this man at Saint Jude's?"

She recoiled. "I hardly know him."

"You think about him?"

She looked down into the valley. "But of the things he stands for. It just seems to me that, when a man like that, not a dreamer at all, but human and—keen, when he believes all that he does—"

"Yes?"

"You were frightened?"

"It made me sick."

"Quitting suddenly he crushed her to his breast as if he meant to force away this barrier between them by sheer force of his love for her. But, although she held up her face for his kiss, he released her as suddenly, without it."

"You're crazy about him," he said thickly. "I'm not blind. I'll get him for this!"

"OO-y! My Corn-n!" H-m, Use 'Gets-It'

Then You'll Have No Corns to Bump! Your Corns Will Come "Clean Off," Quick!

Did you ever see a corn peel off after you've used "Gets-It" on it? Well, it's a moving-picture for you! And you hardly do a thing to it. Put a little "Gets-It" on it.

"Sore Corn Bumped Against Use 'Gets-It' Corns Vanish!"

"I was there," said Elinor quietly. Huff rose angrily.

"Who were there? And who was it who almost fell off the roof? Your parson, I suppose."

Dinner Stories

Two friends were talking over the good fortune of a mutual acquaintance who had succeeded in gaining the hand of a rich girl.

"I didn't think Edward had it in him," said one friend. "It must have been a matter of fact, I happen to know that he told her the simple truth."

"You don't say so?"

"Yes, he told her he couldn't live without her."

There was a young fountain pen salesman who, to his great joy, was succeeding on his first trip in persuading a stationer to order one hundred pens. But all of a sudden the stationer's manner changed to the young man.

"I countermand that order," he barked and hurried into his private office slamming the door behind him. Late in the day his bookkeeper said to the stationer:

"May I ask you, sir, why you so suddenly countermanded your order for those fountain pens?"

"The young salesman," explained the stationer, "booked my order in lead pencil."

At last he discovered Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. He took a dose just to try it. The results were remarkable. He wrote:

"I was in such bad condition that I had given up hope of ever getting well again. I sent to you for one dose of your remedy and took it the same day you sent it. It has worked wonderfully. I took five more bottles, one each week. I am now a new man again. I thank you a thousand times for the good you did me."

What Thin Folks Should Do to Gain Weight

Good Advice For Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women.

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomachs who, having tried advertised flesh-makers, food-fads, physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to life-long skinniness and think nothing will make them fat. Yet their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered combination of assimilative agents has made fat grow after years of thinness, and it is also unequalled, judging from reports, for repairing the waste of sickness or faulty digestion for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable preparation is called Sargol.

Sargol, a strength-giving, fat-producing assimilative element of acknowledged merit have been combined in this preparation, which is endorsed and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A few weeks systematic use of Sargol should go far to produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying nourishing fats to the blood. If not, every druggist who sells it is authorized to return the purchase price. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fat that thin people need are thus provided. All leading druggists supply Sargol and say there is a large demand for it.

While this new preparation has from reports given splendid results as a nerve-tonic and vitalizer, its use is not recommended to nervous people unless they wish to gain at least ten pounds of flesh—Advertisement.

On Education.

"Education," said Uncle Eben, "enables many a man to express himself in a way that prevents him from concealing his foolishness."

Coughs and Colds Not to Be Neglected

Anyone will realize the seriousness of neglecting a cold if he observes results of such neglect among his acquaintances. How often have you heard, "He caught cold, didn't do anything for it and it turned into"—then some dreaded disease is named.

Ordinary colds yield to prompt treatment at the beginning. That is why every family should be supplied with a reliable cough medicine—one that will heal raw and inflamed surfaces, loosen the phlegm, allay irritation, ease the hoarseness and stop the tickling sensation in the throat that does not permit one to sleep.

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is invaluable for relief of coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, tickling in throat, tightness or soreness, grippe or bronchial coughs. It contains no harmful ingredients. It is healing, soothing, efficient and pleasant.

PLOWING CHAMP WINS WITH LOCAL PRODUCT

Big Rock, Ill., Farmer Invades Rival Plowing Camp and Takes Sweepstakes Classic.

For the second time in as many years, Waldo Thomas of Big Rock, Ill., the only plowman who ever won both the Wheatland and Big Rock championships, took premium honors at Wheatland yesterday, driving a Janesville Machine company product, the Janesville S and S bottom, to victory. Thomas' victory in 1914 came after a quarter of a century of endeavor by plowmen from Big Rock to win the Wheatland sweepstakes. Both times he used a Janesville plow.

Taken all in all in the competition local plows swept the field. In both the open field class and in the class for youths under seventeen years of age they secured both firsts.

Hugh Craig of the Machine company attended the Wheatland march, which is in the nature of an annual homecoming. This is the thirty-seventh annual plowing match which has been held at the same place and time.

In addition to the plowing contest there was competition for the first time between machine-driven plows. In previous years the tractors were exhibited, but this year they were pitted against each other in competition.

There were agricultural and domestic science exhibits, the latter judged by teachers from the Aurora high school. In two weeks the Big Rock match will be staged. This event is fully as big as the Wheatland affair.

ARTHUR JOHNSON AT THE MAJESTIC

Well Known Film Star Delights in Clever Comedy.

On the program at the Majestic last night Mr. Arthur Johnson, for years one of the most prominent of photoplay stars, gave a very pleasing portrayal of a harassed groom-to-be in the comedy-drama, "An Hour of Freedom," taken from the Red Book magazine's story, "The Road to Thursday." It was a clever satire on the excessive formality now rather common in the case of a "formal" wedding. Mr. Ben Turpin, in another picture on the program, showed himself to be a comedian of very promising ability. He has been working with Mr. Chaplin recently, and has acquired some of his methods, but he shows an originality all that promises well for his future.

Funeral services will be held at two o'clock at her home Thursday afternoon and from there the remains will be taken to Plymouth cemetery where she will be laid at rest. ALLEN B. WEST, Director

Last year a correspondent in this department asked for advice with reference to the care of green gage plum trees. She had a tree which had never matured fruit to any amount on account of the plums being stung by the curculio.

The advice given was carefully followed by the inquirer with the result that this year a good crop of fine plums were harvested, the editor of this department being favored with some of them testifies to their excellence.

Attention is called to this at this time because now is the time to begin to look out for next year's crop of plums, on account of another very common trouble. This year has been a bad one for brown rot and owners of plum trees have doubtless more or less of it. Unless proper sanitary measures are used it is likely to ruin the next year's crop.

The plums that have fallen from the trees should be collected and destroyed. All the mummies hanging on the trees should be removed and destroyed. This is the work that should be done now. Then next spring very early, before growth starts spray with a strong Bordeaux mixture or the clear copper sulphate solution. Continue the spraying as follows: Just before the blossoms open spray again with Bordeaux and add arsenate of lead for curculio. Just after the blossoms fall use Bordeaux again and arsenate of lead, repeating in about fifteen days and again soon after the middle of June. In late July and early August use ammoniacal copper carbonate soap or Eau Celeste soap.

Should web worms and other leaf eating insects appear use arsenate of lead as soon as they appear.

If Japanese varieties of plums are raised the Bordeaux should be diluted about one-half for the third and subsequent spraying.

In the spring the ground under the trees should be plowed or spaded so that any of the fallen plums that have escaped notice may be buried deep in the soil so that the spores which have developed from them cannot find their way to the soil.

Question:—I have a fine growth of alfalfa, on a piece that has already been cut three times this season. Is it too late to cut it again?

Answer:—There is a very good answer to this question in a recent number of the Wisconsin Farmer, in an illustration which shows graphically the effect of late fall cutting on the vigor of growth the following spring. Pictures of two bunches of alfalfa are shown, one measuring 22 inches in average height when cut, May 12, 1915. This came from a plot that was cut Sept. 2, 1914.

The other sample came from the same plot but represents the average of a portion that was cut Sept. 26, 1914, and measured only 17 inches in average height on May 12, 1915.

Of course one might say that the extra crop cut in the fall would more than compensate for the loss on the first crop of the following spring. This, however, is not all the story. Late cut alfalfa is much more apt to winter kill in severe winters and one runs the risk of losing the field. It should have at least 8 to 10 inches of growth in the following season. In a favorable fall one might secure this after a late cutting, but weather conditions are uncertain and one takes a risk as well as decreasing the vigor of growth in the following season. The matter of the decrease in vigor of growth is also more than the loss of amount produced for blue grass; that persistent enemy of alfalfa in this section, will rapidly develop in the thinned stand and the weakened plants will be soon crowded out by this native grass.

IRISH MOTHER HAS GIVEN TEN SONS TO ARMY.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

London, Sept. 24.—The mother's record in this war is held by Mrs. Mary Pury of Loughree, County Galway, Ireland. She has given ten sons to the British army. Five are dead, in France. One lies in a hospital recovering from wounds. One is a prisoner in Germany. One remains fighting and another is nursing a right arm shattered by a bullet.

This is not all of Mrs. Pury's fighting family. She has a daughter, Mrs. Mary Cossey, Romford, England. Mrs. Cossey's husband is one of Romford's 2000 fighting men at the front. Several weeks ago, Mrs. Cossey supported her large family of small children with the aid of two brothers-in-law. Now they have gone to war and she is struggling on alone.

What Mrs. Mary Pury and Mrs. Mary Cossey have suffered in England's greatest crisis is the story of hundreds of homes of the working classes in the British Isles. A similar story can be told in a smaller way from the mansions of British aristocracy and from the "castles" of the middle classes. But it does not leave the sting of poverty that confronts Mrs. Mary Pury, of County Galway, and her sisters of the lower classes. She will suffer until her body is planted in Irish soil and with her thousands of other women whose husbands have left the spade and shovel.

DENIES THAT JAPAN PLANS TO RESTRICT MISSIONARY WORK

Methodist Mission Submits Report
Refuting Rumors Springing From Ruling on Korean Schools.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Kurehara, Japan, Sept. 24.—American missionaries here are somewhat disturbed over reports from the United States that Japan is planning to restrict the future of Christianity in Japan. This apprehension is said to be the outgrowth of the new school regulations in Korea about which the missionaries think some misleading private reports have been sent to the United States.

Japan Extends Privileges.
The situation led the mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church to hold a special meeting here under the chairmanship of Bishop Merriam C. Harris. At this meeting it was voted to draw up and send to the home church a detailed report of the exact conditions. A copy of the report, which was written by Dean Arthur D. Berry of the theological department of the Aoyama School at Tokyo, has been handed to the correspondent of The Associated Press. It is most optimistic in tone and contends that contrary to any idea of restricting the teaching of Christianity, the Japanese government contemplates the extension of privileges already granted. Among other things, the statement emphasizes the progress made on a project to found a Christian University at Tokyo—a project that is engaging the attention of all leading American and Japanese.

As indicating erroneous opinion in some quarters of the United States, the report cites an affirmation in a church paper that the open door for Protestant missionary endeavor in Japan is fast closing.

In the first place, the report points out that the new regulations affect the schools in Korea only and not those of Japan proper. The essence of the regulations is that the private schools, including the mission schools, are required to conform in grade and curriculum with the government schools. The effect of this is the same as the effect of old-time similar regulations—that is, it will lift the mission schools to a higher level and compel them to stay there, says Berry.

Prohibit Religion in Schools.
As to the prohibition of all religious instruction and worship in the schools, the report says that the rules apply equally to all private schools. They are not directed solely at the Christian schools. Furthermore, Shintoism (ancestral worship) is not to be substituted for Christianity in the schools. The regulations do not apply to co-educational or theological schools, and religious worship and instruction may be carried on outside regular school hours.

The committee thinks that at the end of the two years allowed for compliance with the new order of things the schools in Korea may come under the department of education at Tokyo and there obtain the same freedom and privileges enjoyed by the private schools in Japan proper. It recommends that the Korean schools comply with all the other regulations, but then wait in patience and pray that the evil day of prohibition of religious instruction may not come.

Religious Freedom Maintained.
Our prosperous Christian schools," writes Dean Berry, "which are crowded with students and in which there is required chapel worship and in which the Bible is a text book and which are openly and aggressively Christian in atmosphere and activity—these are the most conclusive proof of the fact that there is religious freedom in educational work in Japan. And this perfect religious freedom is not threatened from any quarter whatever. The attitude of the government of Japan toward religion should be judged by the way it treats Christian work in Japan itself and not by the exceptional circumstances by the Governor General in Korea.

More than that," the report continues, "the department of education has a commission of parliament and considering new regulations which will effect the whole school system of the Empire. The whole tendency of the new movement under consideration is in the direction of greater freedom and opportunity for private schools—which, of course, include mission schools. The power to grant degrees, for instance, has always been kept in the hands of the Imperial Universities. But the new regulations proposed to extend this power to private schools of similar grade.

Plan Christian University.
"We are now perfecting plans for a union Christian University in Japan and new and revolutionary regulations are being considered by the government which would give such a university a standing and privileges which we did not even dare hope to have. The mission board in America can push forward their plans for Christian educational work in Japan with the assurance that no restrictions will ever be placed in the way of such Christian work by the Japanese government."

In conclusion the report says: "The responsibility of any failure in our Christian work in Japan should not be laid at the door of the Japanese Government. The home church should join with us in a profound sense of obligation to the Japanese Government for the thousand ways in which it has willingly or unwillingly created such an opportunity for untrammelled Christian work."

NOT ALL THE CROP HAS BEEN SHEDDED

Growers Are Still Busy With Harvest of Late Tobacco.—Buying Report ed in Northern Counties.

Not all the tobacco crop in the shed and growers are pushing the harvest following the frost scare earlier in the week. Reports from the northern part of the state are to the effect that the crop there is of better quality than here, and buying of some of the best crops is reported. The Edgerton Tobacco Reporter says: "The tobacco growers are still busily engaged in harvesting what remains of the crop that has escaped the many misfortunes of a most disastrous season. In localities some very fair leaf has been secured. A late fall will permit of a satisfactory curing, and even a good deal of salvage may yet be obtained in the hauled districts where the storm was not too severe. Another before the harvest is finished and possibly there will be some fields standing on Oct. 1st, which is an extremely late date."

A little buying of the better crops in the Vernon county section is reported, as well as the more extensive purchase in the hauled districts at declining prices.

"Some movement in cured leaf is being recorded. A representative of an Ohio firm has closed deals for more than 100,000 of 'A' goods from local packers. Some inquiries for binder leaf may lead to considerable business later."

Smuggling of the 'A' packings which is now under way is attended with quite satisfactory results. Losses are encountered there for some years past, though tobacco is hardly sold off enough for present consumption.

MANY LAUGHS IN
"MY BEST GIRL"
Max Fisman and Lois Meredith Amuse Myers Theatre Audiences.

There was many a good laugh in "My Best Girl," a picture play of Channing Pollock, which was shown at the Myers theatre last night. The full hinged around the ever amusing Max Fisman, who matters what the scene always brought a laugh or a chuckle from his audience.

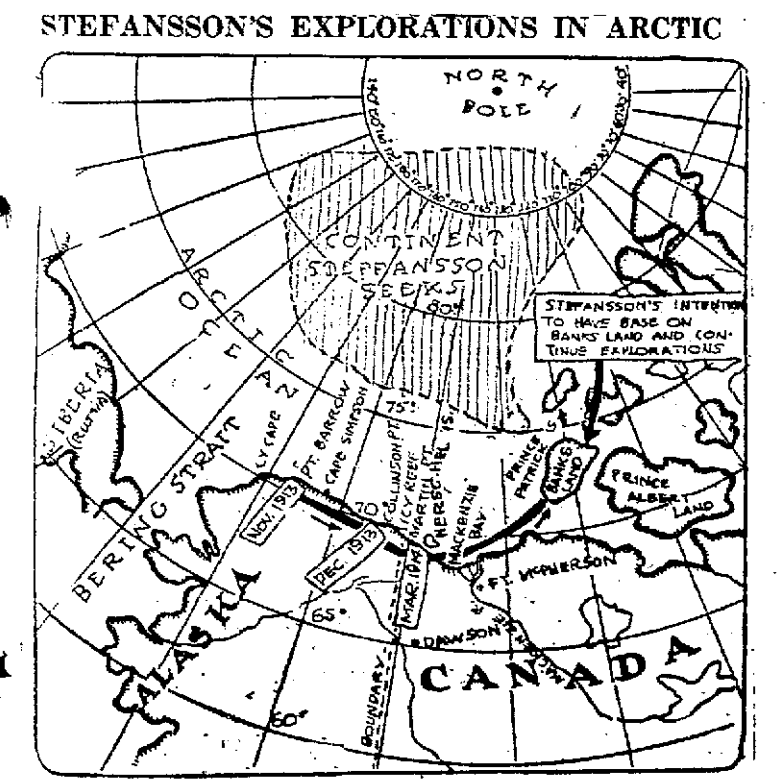

Lois Meredith, a beautiful and popular favorite, was seen as his best girl. She made a very charming character, and as would be expected by those who had seen her before.

In addition to this Metro feature, a Kleanse travelogue through Italy favored the audience with some wonderfully beautiful scenes in Italy before the war. These travel pictures are an education in themselves.

"Best Girl" will be seen again tonight.

JAPAN'S ARSENALS ARE BUSY FILLING SLAVS' WAR ORDERS

Island Empire Refuses to Send Troops to Fight in Europe, But Will Furnish Supplies.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Tokyo, Sept. 24.—The reports printed in Japanese newspapers that Russia has asked Japan for twenty divisions, 400,000 men, of the Japanese army for service in Europe are denied categorically in official quarters. But it is confirmed that Japan will utilize to the utmost her means for producing munitions, not only for Russia but also for France and England.

Decide to Give Aid.
Russia placed a large order for munitions in Japan early last month, but the Japanese cabinet crisis prevented the government from making definite reply until the middle of the month, when a second visit of the Russian ambassador Count Okuma, the premier, conferred with Premier Okuma.

War Minister Oka and Finance Minister Taketomi and finally it was decided at a cabinet council to give the aid requested.

Premier Okuma also conferred with the British ambassador regarding the financing of the plan, including the necessary enlargement of existing arsenals. These matters were adjusted satisfactorily and finally the matter received the approval of the emperor. The work was undertaken and the work was undertaken and the work was undertaken.

The military arsenals at Koishika-wa and Itabashi employ 15,000 workers in time of peace. This number was doubled when Japan entered the war and after the conclusion of the fighting operations the extra force was maintained. The number of Russian demands, furthermore, the working day in these arsenals has been increased from eight to thirteen hours. The output of these two arsenals being estimated at three times that prior to the war. The arsenals at Osaka and Tokyo are to be enlarged and minor work will be turned over to private industry.

Japan Well Supplied.
Japan has a considerable supply of war material on hand for her own use, but this supply her government is not willing to decrease below the limits set by the defense plan. Considerable amounts of material of certain kinds hitherto have been imported from Great Britain. The cutting off of this supply owing to Great Britain's need for all she can produce and more hindered for a time Japan's deliveries to Russia. Also the Japanese workmen, whose experience in certain lines of work was limited, have been educated to a considerable degree of efficiency. Even so the Japanese newspapers say that Japan cannot entirely meet the huge demands of Russia because of her comparatively limited facilities.

The reported request for Japanese troops to aid Russia on the eastern front has given rise to much editorial comment in the Japanese press as well as many expressions of opinion from Japanese public men, both comment and opinion being against such a course.

Count Okuma, in his recent interview given in the Kokumin, said: "There are three ways of looking at the European war and its probable outcome. Either Germany and her allies will secure 70 per cent and the entente powers 30 per cent, or vice versa, or, third, the issues of the war will be drawn. These are the only possibilities. As for our diplomatic position at the time of the peace conference, it will be a complicated one. But should we be left in our present position when the peace conference is held, we shall establish a national policy which should last for a hundred years."

Japan's Claims Restricted.
The premier continued that although Japan has made sacrifices in the war these were not so great as those made by the European nations and since she is not participating in the great battles in Europe her claims are bound to be restricted. But she will certainly send representatives to the peace conference, he said, and will see that her rights are securely guaranteed, especially in the Orient.

Regarding the suggestion that Japan form an alliance with Russia and France to supplement her already existing alliance with Great Britain, Count Okuma said that in forming an alliance the interests of both sides should be taken into consideration and that while the present war lasts the Japanese see no need of entering into a new alliance. He said that he took up the matter with the ambassadors on August 19, especially with the Russian ambassador, and that as a result of the conferences then held it was decided to give further assistance to the entente powers. The premier said that he could not publish at present the contents of the undertaking, but that the policy of sending war materials would be continued and augmented.

No Troops For Europe.
"As for a Japanese expedition to Europe," Count Okuma continued, "there was a desire on the part of England and France that we send such an expedition. But since it is impossible at present the project has met with no support."

He said that he would not make our soldiers fight wholeheartedly as they would do for their own country. Furthermore it is impossible to send an expedition at the expense of our own national defense. We may not be able to extend our sphere of influence in Europe, but we shall be able to let the powers recognize our supremacy in the Orient as one of the world powers.

Visualization of Enoch Arden Does Justice to the Original.
The management of the Majestic, where "Enoch Arden" is being shown today, offers the public a little "inside information" on this picture. For the benefit of the managers, who constitute almost all of its subscribers, the Moving Picture World prints reliable, and often harsh, reviews of the pictures as they come out. Here is what it said about "Enoch Arden":

"This is a beautiful four-reel film version of Tennyson's poem, which has been produced by William C. Banne and appears on the program of Mutual master pictures. Lillian Gish plays the sympathetic role of Annie, Alfred Paget that of Enoch, and Wallace Reid that of Philip. Special mention is due the appropriateness of the settings of the production. There must surely be little fault if any to be found with the picture in any way. Its development is quaint, and beautiful and human. The players are deserving of great credit, as is also the director."

The Rev. Battle of Armageddon

By REV. JAMES M. GRAY, D. D.
Dean of Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—And they gathered them together in the place which is called in Hebrew, Har-Magedon. Revelation 16:16.

Many people are asking whether the present European war is the battle of Armageddon, and whether it means that we are nearing the end of the world, and what relation it bears to the second coming of Christ.

In answer to the first part of the question it may be said that it is not the battle of Armageddon for three reasons. First, it is not in the right location, second, it has not the right objective, and third, it does not represent the right alignment of the nations.

The battle of Armageddon will not be fought in Europe, but in Asia. "Har-Magedon," as the revised version translates it, is a mountain rising up out of the plain of Esdraelon in northern Palestine. Great and decisive battles have been fought there by the Hebrews, the Egyptians, the Saracens, and the crusaders, and here the kings of the prophetic earth are to be gathered, under the influence of demons working miracles, for that battle of the great day of the Lord God Almighty.

The object of this battle will be the capture of Jerusalem, when it shall again be restored to the Jews prior to the second advent of the Messiah on their behalf; and the nations of the prophetic earth engaged in it will be those of the Roman empire federated again under a secular despotism whom many associate with the anti-christ. Those nations do not include Russia, nor do they include Germany or Austria-Hungary, except in part, so that a new alignment of the nations seems necessary before that battle. How far the present European war may contribute to that new alignment, one cannot say, but so far as it does so, it may be called a preparation for the battle of Armageddon.

The End of the World.
2. That this war cannot mean that we are near the end of the world is indicated in another way. For example, all Bible scholars are agreed that a long period of peace and righteousness is to prevail over the earth before the end comes. From a passage in Revelation 20, it is gathered that it will last a thousand years, from which it takes the name millennium. This period not having begun as yet, it is clear the end of the world is at least 1,000 years away.

But we may be near the end of the age, which is a different matter. There have been several ages in the history of the race in which God has dealt with his people in different ways. Each of these ages ended in a catastrophe. That of Eden ended in the expulsion from the garden. That following it ended in the flood. The Mesianic age ended in the crucifixion of our Lord and the dispersion of the Jews among the Gentile nations. Where they are today; and it seems to be the teaching of the Scriptures that the same will be true of the age in which we live. The catastrophe impending is not one which affects the true church which is the body of Christ, but the professing church, and the nations which, having a form of godliness are denying the power thereof. The church will escape the catastrophe by being caught up to meet the Lord in the air, as it is written in I Thessalonians 4, but that which befalls the false church and the nations is the battle of Armageddon and what is connected with it, of which this European war is so frightful a forerunner.

Second Coming of Christ.
3. The second coming of Christ means, of course, his personal in the sense of visible reappearing, and as stated before, so far as the church is concerned the event may be very far. It is after the church is caught up to meet him in the air that the events transpire on earth which focus in the battle of Armageddon. His coming to the earth means the destruction of the nations thus headed up in the anti-christ, not in the sense that all their inhabitants are slain, but that as nations they cease to exist.

The certainty and the imminence of our Lord's return is a mighty motive for repentance and faith in his name, and in the case of those of us who are saved through faith it speaks with equal potency of the necessity for a holy life.
To quote the language of another, suppose this titanic conflict among the nations were the very last event to occur prior to the Lord's coming for his people to take them out of such a scene, does it not give intense significance to the words of Paul in the thirteenth chapter of his epistle to the Romans where he says: "And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed."

It is Our Discipline.
If folks didn't get a check on their prosperity once in a while, they would become ruinously extravagant, trifling and no account.

RUSH ARRANGEMENTS FOR G. A. R. MEETING

One of Largest Building in Washington Being Made Ready for Sessions of Encampment.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 24.—Final arrangements for the reception and entertainment of the Grand Army veterans at their 45th annual encampment during the week of September have not been completed. To correct any impression which might be gained by the association of ideas, it should be stated that the encampment is not to be a tented affair. The reunion will not be held under canvas as has been the case with these affairs in many cities. The Grand Army of the Republic citizens' committee has provided for the use of the veterans, a building adequately adapted for the purposes of the encampment and having, with the exception of the Capitol itself, the largest ground floor space of any structure in the city. This building is the one in which the last census was completed and stands at First street, adjoining the Capitol Plaza. The main floor is divided into two mammoth auditoriums in one of which the big reception on Tuesday night and the regular business session of the encampment will be held. The other has been set aside for campfires and the dog-wag of the naval veterans. On the floor above, there is a row of twenty more rooms wherein the various corps and departments will hold their individual headquarters throughout the reunion. Rooms have also been assigned to be used as headquarters by the military and semi-military or Catholic church, which has brought the matter before the attention of Archbishop Messmer of Milwaukee, issued a statement last evening in reply to the one of President Eaton of the college, in which he said: "Now that the archbishop has taken the matter in hand—it would be a violation of discipline as well as of faith for both the parents and children and both are in danger of excommunication if the Catholic students remain in college and attend the chapel services."

Father Ryan was undecided whether he would treat the controversy in a sermon on Sunday and may speak further to the Beloit Catholics at this time. If so, his message, it is thought, will have much weight on future action of the parents. His words will go far to determine the action of several of the parents of Beloit city students.

The interior of the structure has been a scene of activity, and the appearance by a force of decorators which the Washington committee has brought from New York to give an artistic touch to the encampment. At this writing, the weather bureau officials, judging the future by the past, have given it as their opinion that ideal climatic conditions will prevail in Washington during encampment week, and in view of all the preparations and arrangements which have been made, this is all that is needed to make the forthcoming encampment, the most memorable in the history of the Grand Army.

CATHOLIC PARENTS ARE UNDECIDED ON COURSE TO PURSUE

Father Ryan Declares That Both Students and Parents Are in Danger of Excommunication.

Beloit, Wis., Sept. 24.—The exodus of the Catholic students at Beloit college is to begin tomorrow, although interviews with students of the Catholic faith this morning show that but few are to leave the school. Miss Alice Kingsley, a junior of Oak Park, Ill., is expected to be one of the first to quit the college as she told her sorority sisters this morning that she was going home.

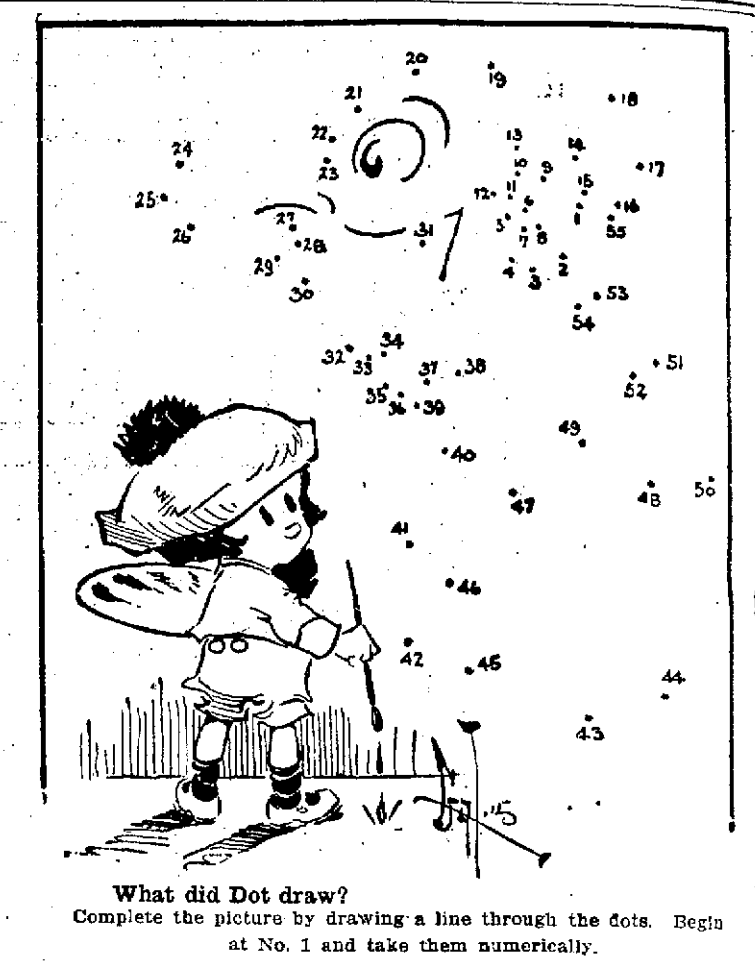

Parents of Beloit Catholic students are said to be very undecided on what course to pursue. In interviews with six parents, five were undecided and one mother declared that her daughter was going to remain in the college and that it would take more than the archbishop's letter to have her withdrawn. The exodus, which will start tomorrow, will not be universal and the greater number of Catholic students will not have the matter decided for them by their parents until next week. Some students state that they will stay regardless of what their parents say and one Catholic, a senior, from South Dakota, who is to obtain a degree this year, is quoted as saying, "I am going to remain at Beloit this year and complete my course and when I go home next summer will make a confession and get back into the church some way."

Father J. F. Ryan of the St. Thomas' Catholic church, who first brought the matter before the attention of Archbishop Messmer of Milwaukee, issued a statement last evening in reply to the one of President Eaton of the college, in which he said: "Now that the archbishop has taken the matter in hand—it would be a violation of discipline as well as of faith for both the parents and children and both are in danger of excommunication if the Catholic students remain in college and attend the chapel services."

Father Ryan was undecided whether he would treat the controversy in a sermon on Sunday and may speak further to the Beloit Catholics at this time. If so, his message, it is thought, will have much weight on future action of the parents. His words will go far to determine the action of several of the parents of Beloit city students.

Two Sources of Income.
A Londoner was showing some country relative the sights of London one day recently, and was pointing out a magnificent old residence, built years ago by a famous and rather unscrupulous lawyer of his time. "And," the Londoner was asked, "was he able to build a house like that by his practice?" "Yes," was the reply, "by his practice and his practices."

JOE MANDOT HOLDS DUNDEE TO A DRAW

Southern Pride and New York Boxer
Fight Ten Sensational Rounds
at New York Last Night.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

New York, Sept. 24.—Although they were not heralded as the boxing champions of the world, and they did not split a $32,000 purse or fight before a crowd of 30,000, Joe Mandot of New Orleans and Johnny Dundee of New York, for the fourth time in their fighting careers, boxed a classy draw in ten rounds here tonight. There never was an idle minute, and the crowd which jammed the arena was kept cheering throughout the milling. At the start of the contest it looked as though Dundee was finally going to break into the winning list over his four-time rival. He got away to a nice lead and had the Baker boy missing continually during the opening sessions, winning the first three rounds by a wide margin. His jumping jack tactics apparently had Joe puzzled for he couldn't hit and his blocking was poor.

Along about the fifth round Mandot began to get his bearings, and he set a pace from there on that had the wop dizzy. Mandot showed a corking left hand and mixed in a riotous cross by the time the eighth round was over he had all but evened up things for his slow getaway. In the ninth he brought a stream of blood from Dundee's mouth with a left jab, and Johnny had to fight like a wild-cat in the tenth to get as good as a draw.

PROPOSE TO ORGANIZE TENNIS ASSOCIATION.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 24.—It was considered certain here today that a state tennis association would be formed and a tournament organized following the interest displayed by towns throughout the state in the matches played by Milwaukee racket stars on their weekly trips. Players in every town decry the fact that the Wisconsin tournament each year is captured by out of state players who are made eligible for play through the national rules. A banquet in October will undoubtedly see the culmination of the plans for a state organization. The Milwaukee players report that every city in which they have played demonstrated a keen interest in the game and provided courts that were in excellent condition.

MORRIS MILLER

When Willie Ritchie is ready for battle again, he will meet Charley White in Milwaukee, according to reports from that city. This is one match that Chicago promoters seemed to have overlooked, as it promises to be one of the best fights that could be arranged in the lightweight class. Both men lack some essential quality, but they are about the most interesting pair that could be selected, and if they perform up to the standard of their first title bout should be worth while.

There isn't a man in the world today able to fight Jess Willard for the championship on even terms. Willard has everything to make him a real champion. Of all the men who are being groomed to dispute his right to the title, every one is lacking in some detail. In the ring at Havana Willard weighed 247 pounds, stood six feet six and had a reach of eighty-three inches. He was a good fighting boxer, with a good knock of straight hitting, a good defense, a punch like a mule's kick, exceptional endurance and stamina and resisting power, and plenty of fighting spirit.

Time and again this season, as in former years, there have been more good horses broken down than have been sent to the post, which has been unfortunate for the owners and trainers, as well as for the public which has been deprived of seeing the supposed good ones perform. Therefore, when a stable small in numbers is compared to the "multi-times gone by" continues to send horses to the post which invariably race up to their established form credit is certainly coming to the man who "preps" the horses for their rests.

Baltimore is in danger of being dropped from the baseball map. The effort of those interested in the game in that city to convince the public that Baltimore is a major league city has once more proved a dismal failure. The fans of the Monumental city welcomed the coming of the Federal league because they were told it meant the re-entrance of Baltimore into major league ball. But the failure of the Knabe team has had the same effect on the attendance in Baltimore as always has been the case and the Federal league is pretty sure to transfer the club out of Baltimore the next season. If this move is made there is little chance of any other league to take a gamble on entering the town.

As a matter of sentiment, Fred Clarke has asked Barney Dreyfuss for his unconditional release, so he could frame it up and keep it at his farm in Kansas as a memento. Under the league rules, Barney was unable to grant the request, until he could get waivers from the other major league clubs. Formally he will ask for waivers and will get them without trouble, as he will explain the reason to each owner.

Some fighters are too able for their own good. Take Sam Langford, for instance. If Sam had always fought at top speed he would have stopped more opponents, but he wouldn't have had anything to eat. There wouldn't have been anybody left to fight who would fight him. So Sam looked after the cash and let the credit go. Another man on something of the same order appears to be Jack Dillon. If he so desires he can move his fist six inches and hit a man hard enough to cripple his whole family. We'd like to see him box somebody when there was really a big purse at stake and when he had been through a course of hard training for the bout.

New Idea for Danger Signal.
As a substitute for red in danger signals, which is the color less easily distinguished by the color blind, experts have advocated blue circles with wide yellow rims.

SIX DIE, SCORES HURT, IN GREAT SUBWAY CAVE-IN IN NEW YORK

Rescuing dead and dying after subway cave-in on Seventh avenue, New York.

An entire block, running from Twenty-fourth to Twenty-fifth street on Seventh avenue, New York, collapsed Wednesday morning, following a premature explosion of a large blast of dynamite. This caused the entire construction work of the new subway at this point to give way. Three crowded cars, most of the passengers in which were shop girls on their way to work, dropped into the chasm.
